

Executive Vice President Glenn Clements to Retire

After 48 years at Stewart, Executive Vice President Glenn Clements has announced plans to retire at the end of 2020.

Glenn has been a part of the Stewart family since the early '70s, during which time he became the youngest associate in company history to be named vice president. Much of his time with Stewart has been dedicated to running direct operations, culminating with his role as Group President Direct Operations from 2011-2016. He has since dedicated years to enhancing revenue, all while paving the way for Stewart's newest generation of employees.

"I've always enjoyed the daily interaction with customers and employees," says Glenn. "I'll especially miss looking for avenues to improve our services and offerings to customers as well as avenues to make Stewart a more rewarding, enjoyable place to work for all. My personal and professional life have been greatly enriched during my 48 years at Stewart."

"I first met Glenn about 25 years ago when he was a guest speaker at a Northeastern regional meeting," says Group President Steve Lessack. "Over the years, I've sat on many leadership teams with him, and I can tell you firsthand that there are very few people that have a working knowledge of our industry equal to that of Glenn Clements. It has been an honor over these many years to call Glenn a colleague, partner, leader and more importantly, a true good friend!"

While Glenn isn't completely sure of how he'll spend his new time off, he does plan to maintain the close relationships he's established here at Stewart.

Please join us in congratulating Glenn on his retirement!
